About to be Buried Alive. Walter Eliot, a young man living with his wife at Williamsburg, N. Y., would have been buried recently as per arrangement with an undertaker, had he really died, as his relatives and friends supposed he did on Friday night. But Elliott is a very much alive man and is highly indignant at the manner in which he has been treated. About two weeks ago Elliott com plained of a pain in the stemach and was advised to try some medicine that his fellow workmen suggested. This had not the deeired effect and he was forced to suspend work and take to his bed. A physician was called in and he found upon examination that Elliott was suffering with inflammstion of the lungs of the most malignant type. Regularly the doctor called at the house to see his patient and many of Elliott's friends came there nightly to keep him company. During the early part of last week it was thought that his end was near. Elliott's more intimate friends and relatives were daily in attendance upon him and waiting for the end to come. On Thursday he railied somewhat, and there were out-ward signs that he would safely pass the But what hopes his wife and relatives had of their sick one were dashed to pieces when Elliott's condition became worse than ever. He failed all day Friday, and in the evening it was thought that his demise was only a question of a few hours. Around his bedside were gathered his wife, everal of her relatives and some of Elliott's brothers. Later in the evening the patient became uncon-clous, and finally gave several convulsive gasps and then was quiet. "He is dead," said one. "His heart has stopped beating." Elliott's face had become an ashen hue and he really bad the appearance of being dead. His young wife sobbed aloud and was joined in her sorrow by her relatives. Later in the evening an under taker came with several assistants and all the paraphernalia necessary to prepare the body for burial. When the icebox had been carried into the house and left in the hall until the mourners had left the room, the undertakers proceeded to do their work. The mouth, it is said, looked a little out of shape on account of the suffering Elliott had undergone, and it was straightened. While the men were performing their usual services Elliott suddenly opened his eyes and then raised his head. The undertaker and his assistants were thunderstruck. Just as one of the assistants was retreating to ward the door the revived patient stam-mered out: "W-h-s-t, w-h-s-t are you go ing to do with me?" "Nothing at all," exclaimed the alarmed undertaker as be called the boys to help him carry the poor

SHREWD TRAMP.-Some time since a plainly dressed, but respectable looking man put in an appearance at Quantico, and stated to the section master of the R. F. & P. R. R. that he had been appointed "General Supervisor" of the track from Washington to Richmond, and wished to go over his section. The section master at once put his velocipede car at the service of the "General Supervisor," and in a few minutes they were running over the section with all the speed that two brawny hands could get out of the velocipede. The "Supervisor" made sundry comments on the condition of the ties, road bed, etc., and was highly complimentary to the section master. Arrrived at the end of the section he was turned over to the next section master with a like result and by bim to the next, until he arrived at Ruther Glen, where he was taken to dinner by the gentleman in charge of that section, and started from there further South on his flying trip. From Ruther Glen, a message was sent Maj Myers about the new functionary, and the major at once detecting the fraud, wired Hanover Junction to intercept him. Before the message reached the Junction the gentleman, who was going South so rapidly, suspected something and took the C. & O. train to Richmond, having ingeniously worked his way from Quantico and gotten a good dinner at the expense of the section masters along the route.-Fredericksburg Free Lance.
